

Knowledge	Subject skills	Literacy	Numeracy
show the links between different topics, to recognise the relationship between the physical and human world.	evaluate the different viewpoints and show an understanding that conflicts may arise when managing places.	You have written in paragraphs demonstrates a clear point and structure using connectives, PEE etc.	You have drawn bar, line graphs, pie charts, choropleth maps and cross sections with accuracy. Titles, axes, labels and keys are evident. You have interpreted more complex graphs with highly accurate descriptions and explanation. You have used a wide range of figures/data used to support.
give detailed reasons for change/ causes/ consequences using key geographical terminology.	realise that viewpoints vary and that this will result in different approaches to managing places and people.	You have used subject language with precision using some structure and connectives to your writing.	You have drawn bar, line graphs, pie charts and cross sections with accuracy. Titles, axes, labels and keys are accurate and relevant. You have described graphs with accurate descriptions and interpretation. Good range of figures/data used to support.
give basic reasons for change/ causes/ consequences using some geographical knowledge to back this up.	show there are different views on geographical issues and use these to form basic conclusions and make decisions.	You have spelled key words accurately and used an appropriate style for the task.	You can locate places using 6 figure grid references. You can draw bar, line graphs, pie charts and cross sections with accuracy. Titles, axes, labels and keys are evident. You have described and interpreted the graphs with more accuracy and some reference to figures/data.
describe places and processes investigated	give your opinion based on your knowledge and understanding of the topic.	You have used some key words in your writing. You have used some complex sentences.	You can recognise heights on maps using spot heights. You can draw bar and line graphs with some accuracy. Titles and axes are evident. You can describe graphs using basic descriptions and limited use of figures.
identify key facts about places and processes.	show basic opinions about geography related issues.	Your spelling is mostly accurate. Your work is clear. You have used basic sentences with punctuation.	You can locate places using 4 figure grid references. You can draw basic graphs with some accuracy e.g. bar charts. You can make simple statements about graphs and diagrams.

